

Desire Lines and Disorientation

A Walking Score

We gather on the ground, and we co-create the ground upon which we gather

We walk together, we stay together, we take a walk along desire lines
In the grounds, in our minds and in full knowledge of our bodies

We orientate following our desires & respect each others, moving with them as a group
We change direction when we feel a pull to

We take time, we stop, we take it in turns; we each take a turn
We observe the formation; if one becomes dominant the rest of the group should come up & absorb that dominance back into the texture of the group

We change pace, shape and modalities, we play
We do not need to move in an established way

We move when we feel a pull to, we do not need to talk but we might We bring attention to where we reside & move around the space & each other
We let our bodies speak too

We embrace circumstance, we embrace the erotic
We dismiss the logic of navigation
We orientate by desire
